

I oppose the FCC proposal to stop regulating broadband service. I go out of my way to choose independent contractors and companies from which to purchase services. I value, enjoy, and profit from the close working relationship I have with the principals of smaller independent companies. If the FCC were to stop regulating broadband service, allowing the big Bells to limit access to their lines, you ease the pressure on the monopoly companies, changing the available options for services for the worse. I will be following this issue closely, and hope the FCC will strive to keep competition healthy by continuing to regulate the big telephone companies with regard to Broadband service.
